² Certain of the rights listed in the table to the June 8 memorandum, such as meeting or voting rights, are relevant only in multiple-member contexts, and are not applicable where a corporation has a sole member. Accordingly, these rights will not apply to the CMSM for practical purposes. Similarly, in the CMSM model, there will be no classes of members, so rights given to member classes will be inapplicable as well. We have not listed these rights herein, but they include rights relating to (11b/c) suits to resolve director/member deadlock, (19) due process for member expulsion, (21-28, 31) member meetings and voting, and (32) equality of member rights. We have also omitted for simplicity certain other member rights, such as the rights to (16) receive reports and (20,29) be protected from liabilities, and (30) the right to approve certain corporate obligations (which may, but need not, be provided to members in the Bylaws).

³ By limit on CMSM's exercise, we mean what sort of structural restraints exist to make sure that the exercise of powers by the CMSM will reflect the consensus of the community and have received full consideration. For certain actions—such as bylaw amendments or articles of incorporation amendments (including those which would eliminate the member structure), or approval of mergers or sales of substantially all the assets of the corporation--California law allows third persons to be given approval rights, in addition to whatever member or Board approvals are otherwise required. These third persons could be participants in the CMSM or from outside the CMSM entirely.

⁴ The CMSM governing provisions that will be incorporated into the ICANN Bylaws can be as flexible as desired. These provisions can provide that the CMSM will exercise its statutory rights as the sole member of ICANN in the same manner as the other decisions under consideration. Thus, the decision to exercise any statutory right in the table could be made through the same community voting mechanism that will exist for making decisions to exercise the essential community powers, with the same SOs and ACs having the same number of votes. At the same time, however, if the CCWG-Accountability decides it would be preferable, each such right could have different requirements for its exercise by the CMSM, including the percentage of votes (available or cast) required to approve the CMSM's exercise of the right. We have indicated the rights where a higher threshold has been discussed, or would logically follow from the thresholds for similar rights, by "supermajority/consensus." Rights which might reasonably be exercised with a lower threshold, but which we are not aware have been discussed, are noted as "majority."

⁶ The power to require ICANN to enter into an IRP—as opposed to filing a derivative suit--would be accomplished by a simple majority vote.
