Position paper prepared by the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) and the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies (IFRC)

Geneva, 14 August 2013

Executive Summary

The International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC), the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies (International Federation), and National Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies present in virtually every country and territory of the world (collectively named hereafter the “Movement”), have been actively engaged in the past two years in a dialogue with ICANN in order to call for the permanent protection of the Red Cross and Red Crescent designations (i.e., “red cross”, “red crescent”, “red crystal” and “red lion and sun”) and related names<sup>1</sup>, (hereafter, the “designations”) from registration as top and second level domain names.

For several years, the components of the Movement have consistently maintained, on the basis of universally accepted norms of international humanitarian law (the 1949 Geneva Conventions and their Additional Protocols), that these designations and names cannot be abused or misused as domain names. The rapid growth of the internet has however made it necessary for the Movement to develop a closer relationship with the internet’s regulatory bodies at the national and international levels (including ICANN), as well as with registrars and registries and all actors along the domain name registration trail. This dialogue is intended to find ways of achieving, implementing and enforcing the level of protection for designations on the internet and in domain names under international law and according to the national legislation in force in jurisdictions around the world.

The recent launch of the “New gTLD program” and the steps already undertaken by ICANN to preserve the designations from registration reflect significant progress. These include in particular the confirmation by ICANN's Board of a temporary reservation at the top and second levels of the Red Cross and Red Crescent designations in the six United Nations languages, as set out in the Applicant Guidebook and in Annex 5 of the revised Registry Agreement. This welcome step indicates that the protection of these designations, which is based upon universally accepted norms of international humanitarian law and which the Government Advisory Committee (GAC) to ICANN has consistently supported, is being given due consideration.

<sup>1</sup> A list of the designations currently reserved from registration according to the Board’s Resolution 2011.06.20.01 is found in Annex 1. A list of the full names of the respective components of the International Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement is attached under Annex 2.

The objective of this Position paper is to urge ICANN's Board to extend the existing protections of the designations from registration as top and second level domain names through:

1. The express extension of the list of reserved designations at top and second levels to include the full names of the respective Red Cross and Red Crescent organisations, i.e:
  - the 189 National Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies recognized within the Movement,
  - the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC), and
  - the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies (International Federation).

This would conform to the requirements of international humanitarian law and would ensure that the reservation covers not only the designations per se (i.e. Red Cross, Red Crescent or Red Crystal), but also the full names of the different Red Cross and Red Crescent organisations, such as "American Red Cross", "Croix-Rouge française", or "Egyptian Red Crescent", and thus as far as possible in the official languages of their respective States of origin. The names of the International Committee of the Red Cross and the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies should furthermore be reserved in the six United Nations languages, together with the usual acronyms or initials of both organisations (respectively ICRC / CICR / CICV / MKKK and IFRC / FICR / MΦKK).

2. The inclusion of the designations on a "Modified Reserved Names List". This would importantly preserve the entitlement of Movement components to register domain names containing the designations should they require doing so.

3. The implementation of a new mechanism or procedure to effectively address the issue of strings liable to cause confusion with or which include the designations. This would reflect the requirements of international humanitarian law, which expressly prohibit at all times unauthorised use of the designations and names, including of "imitations".

Together with the distinctive emblems, these designations facilitate the protection and safe access of armed forces' medical services and of others caring for the wounded and sick in times of armed conflict. They also serve to identify Red Cross and Red Crescent organizations which are mandated to provide neutral and impartial humanitarian assistance in all situations of crisis.

The protection of the Red Cross and Red Crescent designations from any form of misuse, while primarily the responsibility of States, is a core function of the Red Cross and Red Crescent organisations.

The Movement and its respective components wish to urge ICANN's Board to complement the steps already undertaken and to adopt all the measures within its authority and role to ensure the permanent protection of all the designations from unauthorised registration as top level or second level domain names on the Internet.

Introduction

ICANN's domain name system, including the "New gTLD Program", must abide by the important obligations imposed under the legal regime of the 1949 Geneva Conventions and their Additional Protocols, as well as under the national laws in force throughout the world.

These norms specifically reserve the use of the designations ("red cross", "red crescent", "red crystal" and "red lion and sun") to a limited number of duly authorised persons - namely and principally the medical services of armed forces, duly authorised civilian hospitals and medical units assigned to the treatment of the wounded and sick in times of armed conflict, and the respective components of the Movement.

This paper: (1) summarizes the unique nature of the Red Cross and Red Crescent designations and names and outlines the legal grounds and rationale for their protection, and (2) suggests further actions and measures to be undertaken by ICANN and other stakeholders in order to make the protections of the designations both permanent and effective.

It furthermore explains the Movement's mandate and efforts to assist the ICANN community to meet the international and national legal obligations to protect and reserve these internationally recognised designations.

It notes that the 1949 Geneva Conventions, which ground the protections of these designations and names, are today among the most widely ratified treaties in the world, covering virtually all countries and territories.

The primary function of the Red Cross/Red Crescent designations: protecting the wounded and sick in times of armed conflict and those who care for them

The protection awarded to the designations finds its legal foundation in universally ratified international treaties – namely the 1949 Geneva Conventions, today ratified by 195 States, and their Additional Protocols of 1977 and 2005.<sup>2</sup> These distinctive designations sit at the very heart of international humanitarian law and the protection of victims of armed conflict. During armed conflict, the protection of armed forces medical services, and of the wounded and sick on the battlefield which medical services seek to assist and care for, depends to a considerable extent on the full respect of the emblems <sup>2</sup> The first Geneva Convention for the Amelioration of the Condition of the Wounded and Sick in Armed Forces in the Field of 12 August 1949 provides equal protection to the emblems of the red cross, red crescent and red lion and sun. Article 44 provides that "[...] the emblem of the red cross on a white ground and the words "Red Cross, or "Geneva Cross" may not be employed, either in time of peace or in time of war, except to indicate or to protect the medical units and establishments, the personnel and material protected by the present Convention and other Conventions dealing with similar matters. The same shall apply to the other emblems mentioned in Article 38, paragraph 2, in respect of the countries that use them [the red crescent, the red lion and sun]".

The red crystal was confirmed to designate the distinctive emblem of the Third Protocol to the Geneva Conventions by Resolution 1 adopted by Governments and the Movement meeting at the 29th International Conference of the Red Cross and Red Crescent. Article 2 of the Third Protocol Additional to the Geneva Conventions (adopted on 8 December 2005) confirms in its Article 2, that "[this Protocol] recognizes an additional distinctive emblem in addition to, and for the same purposes as, the distinctive emblems of the Geneva Conventions. The distinctive emblems shall enjoy equal status". Article 6 (Prevention and repression of misuse), paragraph 1 provides that "[t]he provisions of the Geneva Conventions and, where applicable, the 1977 Additional Protocols, governing prevention and repression of misuse of the distinctive emblems shall apply equally to the third Protocol emblem". It is inferred that the protection of the designations under the Geneva Conventions must apply equally to the designation "red crystal". The third Protocol Additional to the 1949 Geneva Conventions counts to date 61 States parties and 33 States signatories.

in their protective function. Similarly, in wartime and in other situations of violence, the safe access of the Red Cross and Red Crescent actors to the victims requires that the names, acronyms and symbols of the Movement be duly respected at all times.

In recognition of this fact, the 1949 Geneva Conventions and their Additional Protocols of 1977 and 2005 contain explicit prohibitions against unauthorised use of the emblems and of their designations and require States parties to take adequate measures to prevent and repress abuses.<sup>3</sup> In times of conflict, such abuses can cost lives and therefore may constitute war crimes.<sup>4</sup> At all times, they cause erosion of the respect that belligerents and civilians must have for the distinctive emblems and for their designations. Lastly, abuses can jeopardize the ability of the components of the Movement to fulfil their humanitarian mission in times of war.<sup>5</sup>

The entitlement of the components of the Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement to use its designations for indicative purposes

In addition to their protective function during armed conflict, the emblems and names have a further purpose – namely to identify the respective components of the Movement.<sup>6</sup> The latter thus enjoy an international entitlement under the 1949 Geneva Conventions to use the designations as a means of identification (what international humanitarian law refers to as the “indicative use” of the emblems and their designations). Again, this indicative use flows from the Geneva Conventions and not from international or domestic trademark or even from unfair competition laws.

The components of the Movement have thus a strong and enduring concern to ensure the protection of the Red Cross and Red Crescent designations and names from all forms of misuse or misrepresentation, and to ensure that any entitlement to their use is duly restricted to be in accordance with the requirements of international law. In this regard, it should be recalled that:

- The role and mandates of the Red Cross and Red Crescent actors defined by States in international treaties, as well as under the Statutes of the Movement.<sup>7</sup> These include a unique status and specific mandates to act in situations of humanitarian crises, be they armed conflicts and other situations of violence, natural disasters or other humanitarian emergencies.
- The specific role and responsibilities devolved upon the components of the Movement in support of their national authorities to monitor and to undertake appropriate démarches in the event of any and all forms of misuse of the designations, including on the internet. The ICRC enjoys in this respect a particular mandate as guardian or curator of international humanitarian law, including regarding international rules on the protection of the distinctive emblems of the red cross, red crescent, red lion and sun and red crystal and their designations. National Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies are represented by the International Federation at the international level and undertake their humanitarian work at the national level with the support, as required, of the ICRC, the International Federation and their sister National Societies. They are also entrusted, as auxiliaries to their respective State authorities in the humanitarian field, with monitoring and assisting their public authorities in enforcing the protection of the designations and names.

7 The International Conference of the Red Cross and Red Crescent is the supreme deliberative body of the Movement. “At the International Conference, representatives of the components of the Movement meet with representatives of the States Party to the Geneva Conventions (...). Together they examine and decide upon humanitarian matters of common interest and any other related matter” (see Art. 8 of the Statutes of the International Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement). The International Conference meets - in principle - every four years and brings together the respective components of the Movement (the International Committee of the Red Cross, the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies, and 188 National Red Cross or Red Crescent Societies recognized within the Movement), as well as representatives of all the States party to the 1949 Geneva Conventions (195 by 31st May 2012).

- The designations must at all times be protected from misuse or misrepresentation. Misuse of the designations brings risks and potential damage to the perception of the emblems within the community. It may also cause prejudice to the reputation of the Movement and to its components, as well as to their respective operations in favour of vulnerable persons and communities affected by armed conflict, natural disasters and other emergencies. Any misuse of the designations at any time erodes the respect that belligerents and civilians have for the Red Cross and the Red Crescent, thus compromising the ability of the components of the Movement to fulfil their humanitarian mission and mandate.
- National Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies are entities formed in their respective countries by legislation or by government decree. They are not Non-Governmental Organisations, but are formally recognized and respected as “auxiliaries to their public authorities in the humanitarian field”. As a consequence, the International Federation is treated by the United Nations; General Assembly in a special character neither as a governmental nor a non-governmental participant in UN sessions, but as an observer with special access and participatory rights.<sup>8</sup> The ICRC enjoys on its part a similar international status, as a consequence of its mandate as the guardian of the 1949 Geneva Conventions and of international humanitarian law, stemming from these universally accepted international treaties.
- The growth of the Internet, which represents for the Movement and its components a formidable tool for positioning its work and its humanitarian concerns, has also created formidable new challenges for the protection of the distinctive emblems and their denominations. It has transformed an issue which had been handled over the years by the Movement’s components at the national level into one which has trans-border complexities of new and unparalleled concern. Practice indeed shows that there are many instances in which the designations have been the object of misuse on the Internet by private companies or operators.
- To refer to the wording of the Applicant Guidebook, the Red Cross and Red Crescent designations are particularly vulnerable to Internet fraud and abuse, as illustrated inter alia by the numerous instances of fraudulent use of the Red Cross and Red Crescent acronyms/names/logos witnessed in recent humanitarian crises, such as the 2010 earthquake in Haiti or the 2011 tsunami and ensuing nuclear crisis which affected Japan. Virtually every newsworthy disaster, natural or man-made, is today followed by frauds perpetrated through the internet and its aim to abuse the Movement components’ names. Movement components endeavour to put a stop to such abuses.

To summarize, the designations enjoy two distinct purposes, which both give rise to a global public interest for their protection:

- to serve, along with the distinctive emblems of the red cross, red crescent and red crystal, as the symbols of protection of the medical services of armed forces on the battlefield and those duly authorised to assist them;
- to serve as the designations identifying the respective components of the Movement.

The above leads to the following three conclusions:

- the protection and reservation of the red cross, red crescent and red crystal designations, and related names does not result primarily from their affiliation to or association with the Movement and its respective components. The primary rationale for their reservation stems rather from their international protection as the designations of the protective emblems of the wounded and sick in armed conflict and those who care for them. Therein lies the global public interest any protection aims to uphold. This, it is submitted, distinguishes the Movement's claim from a strictly legal rights claim, which other international organisations may have;
- the protection awarded to the designations does not stem from trademark law (either from common law rights or those conferred by registration);
- due to the global public interest highlighted above, the primary stakeholders remain the States, as High Contracting Parties, to the 1949 Geneva Conventions, which have, as a result of international humanitarian law, the primary obligation and responsibility to enforce the protection of the said designations and names in their own domestic jurisdictions and legal orders - as shown by the GAC's September 2011 letter and the annexed list of domestic laws in force in many jurisdictions worldwide.<sup>9</sup>

The Board must immediately resolve to undertake all measures required in order to permanently protect the designations, and therefore the names of the Red Cross and Red Crescent organisations

We welcome the ICANN Board's Resolution of 20 June 2011, which provided protection, albeit limited and temporary, for the Movement's designations and names from registration as top level domain names<sup>10</sup>, as well as its subsequent decision of 26 November 2012 confirming the temporary protection at top and second levels of the designations pending the outcome of the Policy Development Process on the "Protection for certain IGO-INGO names and acronyms in all gTLD's".

We also acknowledge with appreciation the GAC's successive statements of support for the protection of the designations, beginning with the GAC's letter of 11 September 2011<sup>11</sup>, requesting permanent protection for the Movement's designations<sup>12</sup> in both top and second level domain names. The GAC's letter further recommended that the reservation of the designations extend to multiple languages and receive consideration during the String Similarity review procedures at the top level. In so doing, the GAC acknowledged the important global public interests at stake. For the components of the Movement, global public interest includes preventing misuse or misrepresentation of the Movement's designations and names that would be liable to create confusion within the Internet community or undermine both the protection of victims of armed conflict and the safe access of the Red Cross and Red Crescent organisations in situations of humanitarian crises.

The governments have a legal obligation under the international instruments described above both to implement and to enforce the protection of the designations in their domestic legal systems, including through the provision of appropriate criminal sanctions and penalties in the event of misuse. The GAC's position is an accurate representation of governmental obligations under these international instruments.

As highlighted above, the 1949 Geneva Conventions and their Additional Protocols, and the national legislation in force around the world, specifically reserve the use of the designations to the medical units, establishments and personnel of armed forces medical services and to the respective components of the Movement. The text of Article 53 of the First Geneva Convention is copied below:

“The use by individuals, societies, firms or companies either public or private, other than those entitled thereto under the present Convention, of the emblem or the designation “Red Cross” or “Geneva Cross” or any sign or designation constituting an imitation thereof, whatever the object of such use, and irrespective of the date of its adoption, shall be prohibited at all times.” (emphasis added).<sup>13</sup>

13 It is noted that the Preliminary GNSO Issue Report on the Protection of International Organization Names and New gTLD's, which was received at the time this position paper was being finalized, provides the example of a user of the red cross emblem and "Red Cross" words - namely the Johnson & Johnson corporation - having argued, before US courts and under US law, its legitimate rights to use the red cross and designation based on its long term use and trademark of the red cross words predating the adoption of their legal protection under domestic US law. In this respect, it is important to recall that:

- any such legitimate or grandfathered uses of the designations are strictly limited to those that were lawful on the date the protection took effect in domestic law, whether through the entry into force of the first 1949 Geneva Convention for the given State or through the enactment of a national law. Grandfathered entities may not – under any circumstances – expand permissible uses into domain name registration services by becoming a new gTLD Registry;

- the First Geneva Convention of 1949 (GC I) and Protocol additional III of 2005 (AP III) establish separate sets of rules for the red cross on the one hand and for the three other distinctive emblems and designations (the red crescent and red crystal, together with the red lion and sun, which is also recognized as a distinctive emblem under GC I) on the other. With regard to the red cross, Article 53(1) of GC I prohibits misuse of the emblem in absolute terms, stressing that any use by individuals (other than those entitled thereto under the Convention) of the emblem or its designation, “whatever the object of such use, and irrespective of the date of its adoption”, shall be prohibited at all times. The Commentary to GC I points out that “[t]rade-marks and commercial marks incorporating the red cross must disappear, even if they have been in use for a century or more. Commercial interests, however legitimate, must give way to the higher interests of humanity, whatever the cost may be.” Nevertheless, the Convention authorized States – at least those that were not party to the Geneva Convention of 1929 – to grant prior users of the distinctive emblem a grace period of three years to discontinue its use. This saving clause, however, only covered emblems that were purely indicative in nature and not those that could appear to confer, in time of armed conflict, protection under international humanitarian law.

On the other hand, the fourth subparagraph of Article 53 of GC I and Article 6(2) of AP III provide a more flexible legal protection for the red crescent, red lion and sun and red crystal and their designations. The ban on use of the latter emblems and designations only applies to persons who claim the right to use them after the entry into force of the Convention and not to prior users, who are considered to be enjoying a vested right. The Commentary explains that this difference of treatment exists because it would have been impossible to eliminate throughout the entire world signs that are used as symbols of neutrality in only few countries. Lastly, it should be noted that the second paragraph of Article 6 refers only to protection of the vested rights of the prior users of the third Protocol emblem, without mentioning the users of its designation. The Commentary to Additional protocol III suggests however that; “[t]oo literal an interpretation of this paragraph, should [...] be avoided; there is no logical reason justifying the establishment of different legal regimes for the prior use of the emblem and that of its designation, which is equally protected”.

Thus, the rationale for protect the Movement's designations and any designations "constituting an imitation thereof" (or confusingly similar thereto), is clear and unambiguous.

ICANN's Articles of Incorporation provide that ICANN shall conduct "its activities in conformity with relevant principles of international law and applicable international conventions and local law."<sup>14</sup> As such, it is important to recall that ICANN is subject to the Geneva Conventions and their Additional Protocols, together with national legislation (such as in the United States, 18 U.S.C. §706, Red Cross (Geneva Distinctive Emblems) and 18 U.S.C. §917, Red Cross members or agents), and that the aforementioned laws must be duly implemented by ICANN in accordance with its Articles of Incorporation.

It is crucial for ICANN to comply with its responsibility to conform with international law and with relevant national laws and to undertake the necessary actions in order to protect the designations from unauthorized registration as top level or second level domain names. As outlined above, protection of the designations in the domain name system is mandated by international treaty and the national legislation in force in multiple jurisdictions around the world.

Request for implementation actions by the Board

As explained above, we maintain that the Board should without delay complement its approach toward protecting the designations, by doing what is can to ensure that the existing reservations are made permanent at both top and second levels. The following measures should furthermore be adopted:

- The express extension of the current protection of reserved Red Cross and Red Crescent designations (as foreseen in Annex 5 to the revised Registry Agreement mentioned above) to the full names of the respective Red Cross and Red Crescent organisations (i.e. the 189 recognised National Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies, the International Committee of the Red Cross and the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies). This would conform to the requirements of international law and ensure that the reservation covers not only the designations per se (i.e. Red Cross or Red Crescent), but also the full names of the Red Cross and Red Crescent organisations, such as "American Red Cross", "Croix-Rouge française", or "Egyptian Red Crescent", in the official languages of their respective States of origin. The names of the International Committee of the Red Cross and the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies should be included in the six United Nations languages, as well as their usual acronyms or initials (respectively ICRC / CICR / CICV / MKKK and IFRC / FICR / ΜΦΚΚ)<sup>15</sup>. Such protection could usefully be implemented through an extension of the current list of reserved Red Cross and Red Crescent designations to include a full list of the names of the Red Cross and Red Crescent organisations.
- The inclusion of the Red Cross and Red Crescent designations and names on a "Modified Reserved Names List". This would preserve the entitlement of Movement components to register relevant domain names should they require doing so. This would also conform with the above-mentioned international treaties and norms, which provide for use of the designations by the respective Red Cross and Red Crescent organisations to show their membership to the Movement.

<sup>15</sup> It is noted that the GAC's final Communiqué to ICANN's Durban Meeting advised ICANN's Board to protect the acronyms of the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC/CICR) and the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies (IFRC/FICR), and thus, through an extension of "the same complementary cost neutral mechanisms to be worked out [...] for the protection of acronyms of IGOs".

- The implementation of a new mechanism or procedure to effectively address the issue of strings liable to confusion with, or including, the designations. This would reflect the requirements under international humanitarian law, which expressly prohibit at all times unauthorised use of the designations and names, including of “imitations” (Article 53 of the First Geneva Convention). Illustrations of such imitations or misuse could be, for example, ‘Red Kross’, ‘Reed Crescent’ or “Red Cristal” or “DonateRedCross”. The Movement is committed to continuing its work with ICANN on how best to address the challenges raised by confusingly similar strings, for example in the form of a central repository entrusted to inform legitimate rights’ holders in the event the registration of a “confusingly similar string” to their name is being sought.

Implementing the above is consistent with ICANN’s own Articles of Incorporation, aligns the domain name system with existing legal regimes stemming from international law and national laws, and furthers the important global public interest of preventing and alleviating human suffering in armed conflict and other situations of humanitarian crises – the key mission of the Movement.

In conclusion, the Movement thanks the Board in advance for its continued attention to and support on this important issue.

The Movement remains available to provide any assistance and support which is required.

If an applicant enters a Reserved Name as its applied-for gTLD string, the application system will recognize the Reserved Name and will not allow the application to be submitted.

In addition, applied-for gTLD strings are reviewed during the String Similarity review to determine whether they are similar to a Reserved Name. An application for a gTLD string that is identified as too similar to a Reserved Name will not pass this review.

2.2.1.2.2 Declared Variants

Names appearing on the Declared Variants List (see section 1.3.3) will be posted on ICANN's website and will be treated essentially the same as Reserved Names, until such time as variant management solutions are developed and variant TLDs are delegated. That is, an application for a gTLD string that is identical or similar to a string on the Declared Variants List will not pass this review.

2.2.1.2.3 Strings Ineligible for Delegation

The following names are prohibited from delegation as gTLDs in the initial application round. Future application rounds may differ according to consideration of further policy advice.

These names are not being placed on the Top-Level Reserved Names List, and thus are not part of the string similarity review conducted for names on that list. Refer to subsection 2.2.1.1: where applied-for gTLD strings are reviewed for similarity to existing TLDs and reserved names, the strings listed in this section are not reserved names and accordingly are not incorporated into this review.

Applications for names appearing on the list included in this section will not be approved.

This review determines whether an applied-for gTLD string might cause instability to the DNS. In all cases, this will involve a review for conformance with technical and other requirements for gTLD strings (labels). In some exceptional cases, an extended review may be necessary to investigate possible technical stability problems with the applied-for gTLD string.

Art. 38. As a compliment to Switzerland, the heraldic emblem of the red cross on a white ground, formed by reversing the Federal colours, is retained as the emblem and distinctive sign of the Medical Service of armed forces.

Nevertheless, in the case of countries which already use as emblem, in place of the red cross, the red crescent or the red lion and sun on a white ground, those emblems are also recognized by the terms of the present Convention.

Art. 44. With the exception of the cases mentioned in the following paragraphs of the present Article, the emblem of the red cross on a white ground and the words "Red Cross" or "Geneva Cross" may not be employed, either in time of peace or in time of war, except to indicate or to protect the medical units and establishments, the personnel and material protected by the present Convention and other Conventions dealing with similar matters. The same shall apply to the emblems mentioned in Article 38, second paragraph, in respect of the countries which use them. The National Red Cross Societies and other societies designated in Article 26 shall have the right to use the distinctive emblem conferring the protection of the Convention only within the framework of the present paragraph.

By reason of the tribute paid to Switzerland by the adoption of the reversed Federal colours, and of the confusion which may arise between the arms of Switzerland and the distinctive emblem of the Convention, the use by private individuals, societies or firms, of the arms of the Swiss Confederation, or of marks constituting an imitation thereof, whether as trademarks or commercial marks, or as parts of such marks, or for a purpose contrary to commercial honesty, or in circumstances capable of wounding Swiss national sentiment, shall be prohibited at all times.

Nevertheless, such High Contracting Parties as were not party to the Geneva Convention of 27 July 1929, may grant to prior users of the emblems, designations, signs or marks designated in the first paragraph, a time limit not to exceed three years from the coming into force of the present Convention to discontinue such use provided that the said use shall not be such as would appear, in time of war, to confer the protection of the Convention.

Public comment on the Initial Report on the Protection of IGO and INGO Identifiers in All gTLDs, by National Red Cross and Red Crescent Society legal advisers and similar officers

On behalf of the National Red Cross and National Red Crescent Societies listed below, we are writing in relation to the Initial Report on the Protection of IGO and INGO Identifiers in All gTLDs, prepared by ICANN staff and the PDP Working Group and posted for public comment on 14 June 2013. The National Societies concerned wish to offer the following comments on the report and its recommendations.

(1) Having been actively engaged in this long-standing issue, National Red Cross and National Red Crescent Societies reiterate our firm support for permanent protection of the Red Cross, Red Crescent and Red Crystal designations and related names from registration as top and second level domain names. In this regard we support the submissions of the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) and the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies (IFRC), the two international components of the International Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement (the Movement).

(2) We express our appreciation for the progress already achieved, in particular the confirmation by ICANN's Board of a temporary reservation of the Red Cross and Red Crescent designations at the top and second levels, as set out in the Applicant Guidebook and in Annex 5 to the revised Registry Agreement. This welcome step indicates that the protection of the designations, which is based upon universally accepted norms of international humanitarian law and which is supported by the Government Advisory Committee (GAC) to ICANN, is being given due consideration.

(3) The protection of these designations stems from the 1949 Geneva Conventions and their Additional Protocols of 1977 and 2005, as well as from the legislation in force in over 130 countries[1] ( about:blank#_ftnl ) (a small selection of the latter was identified in the research undertaken by ICANN's General Counsel, as set out in Annex 4 to the Initial Report on the Protection of IGO and INGO Identifiers in All gTLDs). Like the distinctive emblems of the red cross and red crescent to which they relate, their primary use is by the Medical Service of countries' armed forces in times of armed conflict. They also form part of the names of Red Cross and Red Crescent organisations, in order to show their membership of the Movement. On this basis, the distinctive emblems and their designations play an essential function in wartime and in other humanitarian emergencies, and are protected by international and national laws at all times. Their misuse or unauthorised use risks undermining their special meaning and purpose.

(4) National Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies take note of the Initial Report on the Protection of IGO and INGO Identifiers in All gTLDs Policy Development Process, and of the various policy recommendations set out in sections 4.3 to 4.7 of the report. Although we do not object to the approach of the GAC, which groups the Red Cross/Red Crescent and IOC cases together, we find helpful the view taken by the PDP Working Group that protections of IGO, INGO, IOC and Red Cross/Red Crescent identifiers may be considered separately from one another. We would encourage ICANN and its decision-making authorities to confirm the reservation of the Red Cross and Red Crescent designations from top and second level registration in the current round and in all future rounds of application.

(5) Additionally, we would strongly urge ICANN to further protect the Red Cross and Red Crescent designations as follows:

The express extension of the current protection of reserved Red Cross and Red Crescent designations (as foreseen in Annex 5 to the revised Registry Agreement mentioned above) to the full names of the respective Red Cross and Red Crescent organisations (i.e. the 189 recognised National Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies, the International Committee of the Red Cross and the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies). This would conform to the requirements of international law and ensure that the reservation covers not only the designations per se (i.e. Red Cross or Red Crescent), but also the full names of the Red Cross and Red Crescent organisations, such as "American Red Cross", "Croix-Rouge française", or "Egyptian Red Crescent", in the official languages of their respective States of origin. The names of the International Committee of the Red Cross and the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies should be included in the six United Nations languages, as well as their usual initials (ICRC and IFRC).

Such protection could be implemented in one of two ways:

- an extension of the current list of reserved Red Cross and Red Crescent designations to include a full list of the names of the Red Cross and Red Crescent organisations; or
- the implementation of a string similarity review mechanism "by key word" to prevent the registration of strings including either of the "red cross" or "red crescent" designations.

The inclusion of the Red Cross and Red Crescent designations and names on a "Modified Reserved Names List". This would importantly preserve the entitlement of Movement components to register relevant domain names should they require to do so. This would also conform with the above-mentioned international treaties and norms, which provide for use of the designations by the respective Red Cross and Red Crescent organisations to show their membership of the Movement.

The establishment of a string similarity review to prevent the registration of strings confusingly similar to the Red Cross and Red Crescent designations and related names at the top and second levels. This would reflect the provisions of international humanitarian law expressly prohibiting unauthorised use, at all times, of imitations of the designations (Article 53 of the First Geneva Convention). Illustrations of such imitations include, for example, 'Red Kross' or 'Redd Crescent'.

We would like once again to express our appreciation to ICANN and its respective bodies and constituencies for their continued consideration of this important matter. The protection of the Red Cross and Red Crescent designations from any form of misuse, while the primary responsibility of States, is a core function of National Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies. Together with the distinctive emblems, these designations facilitate the protection and safe access of armed forces' medical services and of others caring for the wounded and sick in times of armed conflict. They also serve to identify Red Cross and Red Crescent organisations, who are mandated to provide neutral and impartial humanitarian assistance in all situations of crisis.

Thank you in advance for considering the above.
